

Roger D. Hunter, Esquire

Roger D. Hunter is an attorney in the Charleston, West Virginia office of regional law firm Bowles Rice. Both in his nearly 40 year legal career and through his 19-plus years of service as Chairman of the Investment Committee of the West Virginia Investment Management Board (which oversees the investment of nearly $20 Billion of assets), Roger has worked extensively in matters involving the capital markets and financial institutions, including large financings, bond issues, securities offerings (both public and private transactions), securities regulation, and mergers and acquisitions. His work has involved both domestic and international companies and transactions. Currently, Roger's primary practice areas include public finance and municipal bonds, economic development projects, securities and SEC matters, mergers and acquisitions, corporate finance, and general corporate and business law. He has provided testimony before legislative committees on bond, securities, and economic development matters. He also serves as an expert witness in municipal bond and securities matters. In his practice in economic development, Roger uses his experience in municipal bonds, securities, Tax Increment Financings, and other financings to assist clients and governmental and economic development officials in developing or expanding projects. He is assisting a number of clients with a variety of matters involving investments in Qualified Opportunity Zone Businesses, setting up Qualified Opportunity Funds, and advising such Funds in connection with exempt offerings of investment securities in such Funds.